Пять видов Eulophidae и 10 видов Pteromalidae впервые указываются для Дальнего Востока России. Среди них два вида Eulophidae и девять видов Pteromalidae указываются впервые для фауны России. Роды Chaenotetrastichus Graham, 1987 и Panstenon Walker, 1846 с неописанными видами приводятся впервые для фауны России.

INTRODUCTION

Eulophidae and Pteromalidae are families of chalcid wasps containing many economically important species and a much larger number of poorly known species for which host information is usually unknown (Noyes, 2012). The family Eulophidae was recently examined and redefined to be believed monophyletic based on molecular and morphological data (Burks et al., 2011; Munro et al., 2011). Pteromalidae has been found to be polyphyletic based on molecular data (Munro et al., 2011).

Gumovsky & Proshchalykin (2012) and Tselikh (2012) catalogued known species of Eulophidae and Pteromalidae from the Russian Far East, respectively. I found new records of genera and species of Eulophidae and Pteromalidae for the Russian Far East fauna while examining material collected in Primorskiy krai, Russia, by Marina V. Michailovskaya (currently in Sankt-Petersburg, Russia). All specimens examined belong to the Entomology Research Museum, University of California, Riverside, California, USA (UCRC). All reported taxa are newly recorded from the Russian Far East; asterisked (*) taxa are new records for Russia.
